As the house vote indicated an overwhelming opposition to highway diversion, Governor Hardman then launched, in four separate statements addressed to the people of Georgia, a fight against discount and for diversion. When the senate, by a closer margin but without a single amendment, passed the discount bill the executive indicated he would veto it. In connection with his statements opposing the discount bill, the governor announced that he had exercised his emergency borrowing power and negotiated a loan of $400,000. He explained that $150,000 would be sent to Milledgeville for the relief of that institution and $50,000 to Alto for the same purpose. Practically all of the remainder will be required to pay the expense of the special session. He also declared that the $150,000 would take care of Milledgeville until the regular session in June

Friends of Reduced Police Officer Plan To Wage Battle Today for His Reinstatement.

Fain will be one of the most important matters faced by council this afternoon, and a battle between Fain's friends and those seekings. Fain's friends and those seeking to sustain action of the police committee Saturday in reducing the veteran officer to ranks is in prospect.

Diverse recommendations of the police and finance committees will be before the council for consideration, unless members of the finance committee decide prior to the session this afternoon to rescind its action in recommending that the salary of a captain be added to police depart-mental appropriations for the year to avoid reducing a captain.

Councilman Joseph E. Berman, of the fourth ward, will lead the fight to reinstate Fain to his grade as captain, despite the action of the police committee Saturday afternoon n ignoring recommendations of Chief of Police James L. Treasury officials expected payments for the first quarter of 1930 income taxes to aggregate $525,000,000, compared with $628,000,000 for the corresponding period a year ago.

This reduction was expected despite an increase of 1 per cent in the tax, and was attributed to business depression. The tax is 1 1-2 per cent of the first $4.000 of net income, 3 per cent of the next $4.000 of net income and 5 per cent on all normal income above that amount.

Progressives Plan Support For Roosevelt, If Nominee

BY MARK SULLIVAN.
WASHINGTON, March 15.—The gist of last week's political events reduces itself to the influence which the progressives design to exert upon the two great parties. The key as respects legislation lies in the make up of the next congress. The congress will be made up of an almost exactly equal number of democrats and of republicans in the house and in the senate. Such evenness of division existing in both chambers is unprecedented so far as off-hand memory can recall, and is vital in the opportunity it offers to the progressives.

Overlapping the two parties, and can recall, and is vital in the opportunity it offers to the progressives.

Overlapping the two parties, and made up of a fringe from each, is the progressive group. Merely to state this condition is to suggest its influence. The progressives, by swinging their strength one way or the other. Can determine whether the republicans or the democrats shall prevail. They can determine the outcome of any roll call upon which there is a normal lining up of the two great parties. To put it another way the progressives stand in the middle and ask for offers though, of course, not mercenary ones, for them will get their support. The nature of the offer consists, of course, in willingness to go the greatest length toward the progressives' ideas about legislation.

In this competition for progressive support, the republicans, of course, will not enter the bidding. The course of the republicans has already been determined in the congress just ended. What will happen is that the regular republicans has already been determined in the congressives with their balance of power will oppose them. This is what has already happened in the ular republicans will attempt certain legislation, or take certain positions, and the progressives with their balance of power will oppose them. This is what has already happened in the senate. In short, it is practically inconceivable, as to most matters coming up, that there should be, in the coming congress, any union between the regular republicans and the progressive.

The next question is whether there and democrats, whether the democrats will bid for the balance of power which the progressives possess. The question almost answers itself. It is true there is, in the democratic party nationally, as in the publican party nationally, a cleavage between conservatives and those who are called progressives, if you like them, or radicals, if you don't like them.

To the conservative wing of the democratic party it will be acutely distasteful to bid for the progressive strength or to unite with the progressive strength or to unite with the progressive.

PIECE WORK PLAN!

New Scheme To Give Greater Returns to Those Who Work.

MOSCOW, March 15.—(A)—Plans for reorganization of all collective farms in soviet Russia along lines which seemingly resemble capitalistic methods but which are expected to achieve results in output far exceeding the five-year plan, were outlined in a resolution presented to the all-union congress for approval today.

In presenting the proposal, Commissar of Agriculture Yakublev said the communal farm movement already is a success with more than 9,000,000 peasant families having joined the farms. However, he added that offi-cials admit there are numerous de-fects and unsolved problems in the present system.

Under the new scheme, the commissar said, the mest difficult question—equalization of labor—is expected to be answered by introduction of the "piece work" system in more than $5,000 collectives. The standard of wages will be fixed in either money or commodities so that the man who works hard will receive more than the man who does not. nan who does not.

man who does not.

Previously, peasant families joining the collective farms have made certain contributions of live stock and farm equipment to the common fund.
Many of these then did as little work Many of these then did as little work as possible with the industrious ones doing an undue portion of the work. This resulted in the government not receiving the percentage of grain to which it was entitled under the provisions of the collective farm plan.

At the same time the slack worker would share equally with the hard toilers in the proceeds. Under the new proposed the government will emphaa democratic nomination satisfactory to them. They, at least the shrewder among them, such as Senator Norris, of Nebraska, have no notion of a third party, which would be futile. As respects the republican party, the progressives will, of course, dissent from the renomination of President Hoover. Their leader, Senator Norris, has already voted against President Hoover in the 1928 election. The progressives' hope and purpose lies in having the democrats make a nomination which they can support.

The nominee they have in mind is Franklin Roosevelt, of New York. The particular attraction Governor Roosevelt has for the progressives is proposal the government will empha-size the dictum of "only those who work may eat."

The piece work system already is in use in a number of soviet facto-m use in a number of soviet factories and experiments recently were made of the method on collective farms with excellent results, according to Yakublev.

The reorganization plan, while contemplating the maximum labor of every able-bodied man and woman on the farm, will provide a separate fund to care for the children and the sick

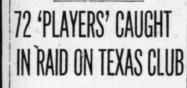

The reorganization plan, while control of the propersives is it in the election."

What has been said so far has to do with union of the progressive so which propressives and democrats on economy issues. As respects prohibition, the progressive position, as put by Senator Norris, is that prohibition is a "sham issue" on which the progressives and the propressive said at an an an adhievance on prohibition as a deliberately arrived at and formally announced policy. The bearing of prohibition on the union between progressives and democrats is a more complex story.

The reorganization plan, while contemplating the maximum labor of every able-bodied man and woman on the farm, will provide a separate fund to care for the children and the sick and injured.

Yakublev told the congress many of the hated kulaks (rich peasant farmers) are on their last legs. He government obtained from the collective farms 487,000,000 pounds.

"The problem of grain in the fiscal year of 1926-1927, while last The commissar told the congress that Russia has the largest farms in the world. One of them, he said, contains over 200,000 hectares (a hectare is almost 21-2 acres). He added that 65,000,000 hectares are under cultivation in collective farms, in addition to 5,000,000 hectares in state farms. A shortage of live stock was increased last year when under pressure of collectivization, many peasure of collectivization. sure of collectivization, many peasants, fearing confiscation of their cattle, slaughtered over 50 per cent of their stock. Joseph Stalin then warned them to go slow but the damage already had been done.

ANNIVERSARY SALE

This sale celebrates three important anniversary events:

First—it's the 4th anniversary of our removal from the old Whitehall Street store into our beautiful and interesting new Peachtree store. The increasing business you have given us proves that you like the convenience of our up-town location.

Second— it's the anniversary of Spring—the season that makes the birds sing and the women buy new clothes for themselves and the family and the home. To meet Spring's demand for smart, new things, our buyers-backed by Macy's tremendous purchasing power-have searched the markets for seasonable merchandise. Many of the Sale items were made within the past two or three weeks especially for this tremendous event. All are fresh from loom and bench. They're so sparklingly new and smart, so definitely of early Spring, 1931, that the last shipments came in only Saturday.

Third—this is the anniversary of the lowest point in the so-called period of depression. A year ago prices were swinging downward, but were still high; and pocketbooks were low. Today, prices are much lower than they were a year ago, and pocketbooks are beginning to take on added weight. You know our prices are always "at least as low as the lowest in Atlanta." During the Anniversary Sale they are going to be definitely lower than the new low 1931 price levels!

> We cordially invite you, our friends and customers, to come into our business home during the next three days and share in this feast of new, smart merchandise at prices that mean big savings!

Put the Ford Truck on your pay-roll

Ford platform bodies and dump bodies are used extensively in highway building, general construction and excavation work. In addition Ford dump bodies are used for hauling coal, coke and garbage.

WHEREVER hauling-equipment is used or needed, Ford commercial units can be of service. They are strong, have a wide range of speed and power, and can readily be adapted to any specific use. There is a body-type for every purpose, and a choice of two different chassis, and three different wheelbases. Because of their low first cost, reliability, and low cost of operation, Ford units offer marked economy for any hauling-job.

Many features of the Ford add to its reliability, thus reducing the cost of maintenance, and increasing its economy. For example, each part is carefully studied to determine what specific steel will give it the longest life and best service. Some require tough steel; others extremely hard - so more than 40 different kinds of steel are used.

More than twenty ball and roller bearings are located at important points throughout the truck. In all forward speeds, the entire drive, from engine to wheels, is carried by these anti-friction bearings. Wear on many moving parts is thus reduced.

The value of these, and other features, becomes more evident as Ford units continue to give mile after mile of faithful service, seldom interrupted by the need for adjustments or repairs. Fords stay - and pay - on the job.

The Ford 11/2-ton truck is available with either 1311/2-inch or 157-inch wheelbase. There is a choice of high or low rear-axle gearratios, of single or dual rear wheels, and of open or closed cabs. The light delivery-car, which has the same chassis as the Model A Ford car, can be equipped with bodies for every light hauling-purpose.

Your Ford dealer can show you a Ford unit that is adapted to the special requirements of your business.

When a Woman's Heart Is Involved She Is, as the Russians Say, "From the Mind Gone Out." "The Snob Is One Who Meanly Admires Mean Things,"

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

I am another girl in love with a married man. I love him so much that I live from the thin that I live him, yet I feel I must give with the thin that I may a from the thin that I may dream as long as I stay in love with a narried man. My question is what would a himself of the many of the

ANSWER:

I don't see how there are enough married men to go around; judging by the letters that come into this column on that topic. All the writers of such letters face the same problems. All of them justify themselves in the same fashion. All of them are unhappy over the situations which confront them. All of them know it is a hopeless state. All of them know wisdom and decency and expediency and the best element of society and their own consciences command them to give up these married men and return them to their own firesides. Yet they vacillate and procrastinate and try to talk themselves into a more advantageous position than they appear to firesides. Yet they vacillate and procrastinate and try to talk themselves into a more advantageous position than they appear to hold. It cannot be done. There is no advantage in it for any of the parties concerned. There is no happiness to be got out of it for anyone. There is only heartache and humiliation, actually, and disgrace and exposure, potentially. Don't think me unsympathetic. I know that no woman deliberately gets herself into such a mess. I know that there is only a little compromise at first, so little that it hardly appears to be a compromise. But, like the little crevasse in the levee, that compromise widens as the waters rise and presently it is a complete concession.

These married men seem to have a way of indicating that there may be a divorce later on that will straighten matters out for the woman involved. Later on they have a way of changing the subject of divorce and remarriage and nothing comes of the indications but a dead stop, or a contraction of the contraction of the later of the period, which marks the end of the hope. Can't you see that by all the laws of love and life and religion there is nothing in such an affair but trouble? Can't you see that the woman has everything to lose and nothing to gain? Can't you see that the man has a perfectly good open door through which he may pass to safety while you are trapped? Of course you can, but when the woman's heart is involved she is, as the Russians say "from the mind gone out." sians say, "from the mind gone out."

Relinquish your grasp on what you cannot possibly pull away from its moorings and grasp something you can possess completely. Let the "dead bury its dead." Tell no one what you have done. It cannot do any good to spread your sordid story over the clean page of a legitimate love affair. If some good man falls in love with you (and the likelihood is that no good man will, while you are involved in this affair), take into that relation the fragrance of a new and cleaned affection and not the malodorous flavor of a soiled and sordid one.

CAROLINE CHATFIELD.

DEAR MISS CHATFIELD:

Not long ago I met a friend whom I have known for years and was delighted to see her. She was with a girl who stood higher than she socially and she pretended not to see me. I smiled and spoke and for reply she rolled her eyes upward. I didn't know whether to be amused or angry. However, I felt unhappy the rest of the day. Now, how do you think I should treat her the next time we meet? My mother has always taught me not to snub anybody. As she expresses it "Life is too short and eternity too long." I treat an old servant courteously when I meet her on the street. What do you think of snobbishness?

ANNE.

The logic of your problem leads you to the inevitable conclusion that if you imitate the manners of your snobbish friend you are no better than she. Snobbishness is a most pitable confession of weakness. Yet we are all guilty of it at some time or another. True, it is not always social snobbery that we display. There are other brands of snobbery equally heinous. Intellectual and religious snobs are not rare, although we call them by another name.

The folly of snobbery lies in the fact that it always pro-claims to the world about us the very thing that we are trying to disclaim: our inferiority. The girl who didn't recognize you on the street because she wanted you to think her superior be-trayed the fact of her own inferiority. When we act the world knows we are acting. When we are ourselves the world knows it and applauds.

I always love the Bible parable about the big banquet. You remember the man who assumed his seat to be at the head of the table was asked to give it up in favor of the modest man who assumed his place to be at the foot. He got the good seat but he couldn't hold it. It is the same way with the snob. He may take the best seat and "snoot" the passers-by but one of them will dislodge him before the banquet of life has fairly begun. Now that is what I think of snobbery. I think pitiful thoughts about the person who fancies that a little matter of birth, over which he had no control, entitles him to anything better than his less well born brother. A famous English bishop once said he didn't deery or minimize the advantages of hirth, and breeding but he minimize the advantages of birth and breeding had never heard any one boast of it who had anything else to boast of. The old French phrase "Noblesse oblige," which means nobility implies obligation, is not a bad one to teach the young. Your mother has taught you that and something better; namely, that life is too short to fill it with deeds that make others uncomfortable and that eternity is an awfully long time in which to regret them.

I heard a young business woman make a talk the other night and when she had finished I asked her for her notes. It was a bold request but she was gracious and granted it. These are some of the things she said: "You are writing a book and that book is a record of your life. There are many biographies in the libraries of the world but every one who lives writes a book, a life story and everyone leaves it behind. Some have written and passed on but as long as time endures the record remains. Others are writing today and the hours are recording their lives. Both the mistakes and the good deeds are being written. Later those people may want to turn back the pages of life and erase some unkind word or deed but they cannot. The ink of today will not write upon the pages of yesterday. Time has glazed the surface of those pages and the opportunity has gone forever."

"A rich gentlewoman accidentally upset a ragged, dirty, little newsboy who was selling his papers on the street. With profuse apologies she stooped down to help him pick up his papers. The child doffed his ragged cap and said 'I like to be knocked down by a lady like you.'"
"The child playing at drawing on the beach may stand and watch the incoming tide crase his pictures but the waves of time are not so kind. They do not obliterate our diaries. They are read tomorrow and tomorrow."

The wise will not want a record of snobbery on these pages. Thack-

It seemed to Peter that even Mar-It seemed to Peter that even Martha, in her most finicky mood, had never been harder to please in the matter of choosing a restaurant. But there was a reason for Charley's fastidiousness. He wanted to avoid all places where policemen and newspapermen might be expected to appear, and, equally, any place favored of Peter's friends. But, also, he wanted a large, thick steak. He settled, finally, on Billy the Oysterman's.

"Don't you get to feelin' too good, Pete," said Charley, more soberly. We ain't out of the woods yet." He looked at his watch. "Time we was movin' on, though, at that."

anyone could tempt Martha to eat this night it would be Manuel, and there was a certain satisfaction in the thought that she had found a shelter, no matter how temporary it might be, in his rooms.

He wondered if she had realized how he had taken to heart her lightest word about those rooms of his; it she had observed that the wall paper she hadn't liked had been replaced; if she had seen the McBey etching she had senited that corner, "All right, Pete-condand bought immediately after leaving she had admired one day in a dealer's window, and that he had gone around and bought immediately after leaving her, and then hadn't dared to give her because it had cost too much. He had always hoped he could, some day. His own appetite was quickly satisfied. Not so Charley's size after sitting opposite him at dinner. They'd ordered a steak intended for three, and Charley had asked no odds when it came to disposing of his shares. Afterward he had pie a la mode, and he drank cup after cup of coffee. Nor was he ready to move on even then he sat back, replete, and lighted one of his inevitable cigars.

"Easy does it. Pete," he said. "There's a chance—I'll tell you that much. But it's touch and go."

"But if you know—'' cried Peter, in an agony of impatience.

"I think I know," corrected Charley. "That ain't the same thing, and even if I did now—how many times have I gotta tell you that in this business it ain't what we know that counts, but what we can prove? Connolly don't know the madam bumped Thayer off—but he's pretty damn sure he can prove she did. And he wouldn't trade that, even up, for what I know this minute!"

"But—that's fantastic!" cried Peter.

Todau's Cross-Word Puzzle

So again Peter had to play a waiting game. But he was helpless.

So again Peter had to play a waiting game. But he was helpless. Charley would tell him precisely as much or as little as he pleased. Still he was not unduly impatient as he waited in the dark cab, on a Centre street corner, with the incessant traffic of Lafayette rumbling along half a block away. He didn't know what Charley was doing, but he could guess that, however obscurely to him, forces had been set in motion that were carking in Martha's interest, and Charley, he could see for himself, was well pleased, even though he had suffered a check at the hands of Ross. If, indeed, he had; Peter wasn't quite sure of that.

Charley came back in less than half an hour. He was actually singing—or making sounds that, Peter guessed, he supposed to be musical, and the tune was one that Peter remembered from two or three summers back.

"Oh, boy, I'm lucky, I'll say I'm lucky, Thi-is is my lucky day!" Charley was crooning. "When'd you eat last, Pete?"
"Ereakfast," said Peter, and realized, rather to his disgust, that he was hungry.

"Same here," said Charley. "You buyin' dinner?" said Charley. "You make me sick. Ain't it enough to be moondally was pare out that was about this dame the way you are vouself without training a raw deal?"

Dixie Association Blows Up as Macon Refuses To Enter Team CRACKERS FACE FIRST ROSTER CUT THIS

Word from several Southern league owners this year by direct and indirect channels indicates that it is a very poor time for veteran ball players to be holding out for more pay.

For years the Southern league has been a breakfast stop for major league ball players traveling down the line. They have found a haven of rest in our league at comfortable sal-

Some of them have worked, others have relaxed from the strain of hard playing and grown old in an effortless way.

That does not apply, of course, to young men who took a fling under the big tent, and came back for more seasoning. They have made history and gone back for more.

SLOW TO CHANGE.

Now the magnates-after all these years-have decided that it is better to put a team of young ball players out there who are hustling and let them make a few mistakes.

The public likes to see ball players who are trying. They like to watch players with a future. They prefer that sore to players with a past, however glamorous it may be.

And the magnates also realize that they can keep up appearances and at the same time reduce the overhead. This salary item has reached alarming proportions no farther back in history than 1930.

In realizing the condition and taking steps toward correcting it, club owners of the circuit have proceeded with characteristic tardiness. It has taken them all these years to learn what Charley Frank knew in 1919. He had his greatest seather the state of the proceeded with spiller, still refused to the loop fell through. son artistically and financially with a team of youngsters that cost him about $1.39 and drew very little pay per month.

THE CRACKER ATTITUDE.

Indications are this year that young players who can show anything like Class A form will be given a chance all around

The Cracker officials, I know, are leaning strongly toward the younger set. The old-timers can play ball, of course, but the youngsters have a potential sales value at the end of a successful season that the oldtimers do not have.

Manager Dobbs has done little toward selecting his team

Manager Dobbs has done little toward selecting his team yet, but one detects a strong preference for the younger men. He has a field full of talent to select from and just now the debutants rate pretty high.

HOW TO FOIL HOLDUPS.

Tobe Edwards, who writes sports in our set, was the victim of one of the hourly holdups last week-end. The stickup men got nothing from Tobe, but not for the reason you may guess. Tobe is not one of those newspapermen who is always broke. That has gone out of fashion. Tobe had a supply of folding money in his side pocket.

But Tobe, as indicated, makes his living by using his brain. He learned to think fast playing baseball at Georgia Tech. While waiting for a friend to pick him up in an automobile and the holdups to pounce upon him, Tobe was standing with his hands in his pockets. It is not considered good form for gentlemen to stand with their hands in their pockets, but Tobe was raised

"I attribute the failure to organize the Dixie league to the fact that the Macon baseball park, on which Brooklyn which had Macon as its farm for three seasons in the South Atlantic league and which waited until the last minute to take baseball away from Macon, holds a lease, was available to but one person, Roy Williams. Former Macon club owner, who would not enter a club in the Dixie.

"Had the Brooklyn club officially given permission to the city officials to allow anybody that wished to operate a club in Macon to use the park the league could have been organized, six cities would have beseball and number of players would have beseball and number of players would have been organized, six cities would have beseball and number of players would have been organized. Roy Williams, after the conference with Spiller, said tonight that he knew of a person interested in putting a club in Macon, but that he could not obtain Luther Williams field.

Roy Williams, after the conference with Spiller, said that he thought the proposed league was "dangerously weak" and that he was not in favor of a 50-50 spli with their hands in their pockets, but Tobe was raised in the country and has never given up the grand old

So when the gallant road agents poked a rod at Tobe, he obediently stuck up both hands. But in his right fist was his bank roll. The bandits frisked him, found nothing, and made a getaway in a nearby car.

The Edwards system for foiling bandits is passed along to those whose time has not come yet.

HOW ABOUT IT?

But Tobe raised an interesting point in connection with league.

The Hot Springs meeting, at which his experience. He asked:

"Don't you think that if a citizen is held up in the city limits and robbed, with hundreds of policemen off somewhere attending a wrestling match or looking for automobiles parked overtime, that the amount he lost should be credited on his city tax bill for the current

MACON, Ga., March 15 .- (A)-R.

MACON, Ga., March 15.—(P)—R. J. Spiller announced here tonight that the Dixie Baseball Association, formed in Montgomery four weeks ago, with fourteen cities interested, will not operate this season.

After five cities—Columbus, Ga.; Montgomery, Ala.; Selma, Ala., and Anniston, Ala., and Pensacola, Fla.—today qualified for entrance in the Dixie, Macon, the city needed to complete the league, refused to enter.

Macon did not send a representative to the Columbus meeting today because the local baseball committee did not favor the idea of "pooling" gate receipts, nor did it think the cities entered in the league were strong enough to warrant, the loop running the entire year.

Officials of the five cities represented at Columbus today decided to "leave it up to Macon" to give them baseball. They dropped the "pooling" idea and decided on a 50-50 split on

As a result of the failure to organize the league, baseball players owned by the proposed Dixie league clubs will be free agents tomorrow, it was announced. The National Association of Baseball Clubs gave the Dixie until midnight tonight to organize, and if it did not by that time all players with contracts with the clubs were to be declared free agents.

Dry Cleaning

El S not mince words. You can get all kinds and qualities of dry cleaning in Atlanta -some of it isn't worth a cent, some middling—but at these plants you get fine work —the real thing.

Our belief is that if a suit deserves cleaning at all it wants to be cleaned right. So we don't countenance half-way methods-we don't stop when a garment merely looks 'better"-we clean it CLEAN-make it fresh, snappy and good-looking as that garment can possibly be.

Send your clothes to these plants, and you know they look their best.

They're cleaned carefully, treated like gentlemen. They look like a million dollars, and stay fresh longer, after our thorough cleaning.

Every way you count it—it saves the suit and saves money to get this dry cleaning.

It is therefore imperative, in order to enable the Committee representing the First and Consolidated Mortgage 6% Gold Bonds, Series A, properly to protect the interests of such bonds in the receivership proceedings and in working out a reorganization plan, that bonds should promptly be deposited with Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Depositary, or with one of its agents designated below. The Committee, on January 31, 1931, executed a deposit agreement for such bonds, copies of which may be obtained from the Depositary or any agent.

All bonds deposited must be in bearer form, or, if registered, must be duly endorsed in blank or accompanied by properly executed transfer in blank, and, if coupon bonds, must be accompanied by all coupons maturing after September 1, 1930. Certificates of Deposit will be issued by the Depositary. Certificates of Deposit are listed on the New York Stock Exchange.

Prior to the receivership Messrs. Dillon, Read & Co. and Ladenburg, Thalmann & Co. were appointed by the Railway Company as Reorganization Managers for the purpose of developing a plan of reorganization subject to the approval of the security holders. The Reorganization Managers and the respective Committees representing the various Seaboard securities have for some time been studying the problems of the system with a view to formulating a plan. As soon as an acceptable plan is developed, the terms thereof will be submitted to depositing security holders. BONDHOLDERS ARE URGED TO DEPOSIT THEIR BONDS PROMPTLY.

The enthusiastic reception accorded the personal appearance of Charlie Chaplin upon his first visit to England, his native land, and also Germany, is in accordance with the genuine enthusiasm which greeted his premiere screen appearance at the Rialto theater showing to capacity houses for the past week and which is now running for the second week. The fliming of "City Lights" demanded the utmost of Chaplin and his associates. Hundreds of gags were worked out, tried out, and when found wanting were thrown out. Only the best and most delectable bits were used in the preparation of this masterpiece in pantomime in order that Chaplin would still maintain his throne as the king of comedy!

With this understanding of comedy appeal, it is little wonder that the world should pay Chaplin this homage and it is to this fact that the enormous responses to his latest film creation, no matter where shown throughout the width and breadth of the land, can be credited.

In Memory of Walter Richard Brown. New Canaan.

The winds of March sweep over the beautiful place, with mournful cadence.
The morning un ascends the eastern skices—we, with dimmed splendor.
Birds, in full orchestra, warble in the trees. But their music is a requiem.
Comes the night, the moon has risen, and looks down in andness upon the scene, so reacts, assembled to greet a prince of hosts. Over all settles a brooding silence.
Walter Brown is away—beyond our mortal ken. He has "wandered into unknown lands, and left us dreaming how very fair they must be, since he lingers there."
If spirits may return to earth, it is easy to imagine his hovering, if only for a fleeting moment, over "New Canaan," the place he loved so well.
Recently he was asked, "Will you live here always?" "Always," was his quick response, "until the roll is called up wonder, then 'Angels tell my mother I'll be there.'"
With hearts bowed down, our hands reach upward in supplication, the age-old query on our lips, "Where is he?"
"We know not where His islands lift of the handsomest men of his time. Barrymore's real name was Herbert Blyth, but he changed this to Barrymore as Blyth, he felt, was not a good

Their fronded palms in air.
We only know we cannot drift
Beyond His loving care." Softly faith whispers to our listening ear, that we must leave him to One who is the "Resurrection and the Life."
